

OCTOBER - MARCH GROWING SEASON

TABLE OF CONTENTS

COOKING GREENS

pg2

Bok Choi	Mustard Mix
Kale	Swiss Chard
Mizuna

SALAD GREENS

pg3

Buttercrunch Lettuce	Arugula
Colorful Lettuce	Salad Mixes
Romaine Lettuce	Spinach

BRASSICAS

pg4

Broccoli	Cauliflower
Cabbage

ROOT CROPS

pg5

Carrots	Radishes
Beets	Turnips

AROMATICS

pg6

Green Garlic	Spring Onions
Bunching Onions	Fennel

HERBS

pg6

Cilantro	Parsley
Chives	Sage
Dill	Savory
Oregano	Thyme

PEAS

pg7

Snap Peas
Snow Peas

FLOWERS

pg7

Beneficial
Edible

COOKING GREENS

Space-efficient, high-yielding and very nutritious, cooking greens are excellent selections to get a steady stream of delicious meals from your garden. Once established, these attractive plants can typically be harvested multiple times a week for months. We're happy to be offering Ethiopian Kale again, with a milder bitterness than European types, and a new variety of Dinosaur Kale with striking pink midribs.

Bok Choi

Mustard Mix

Mizuna

Red Russian Kale

Dinosaur Kale

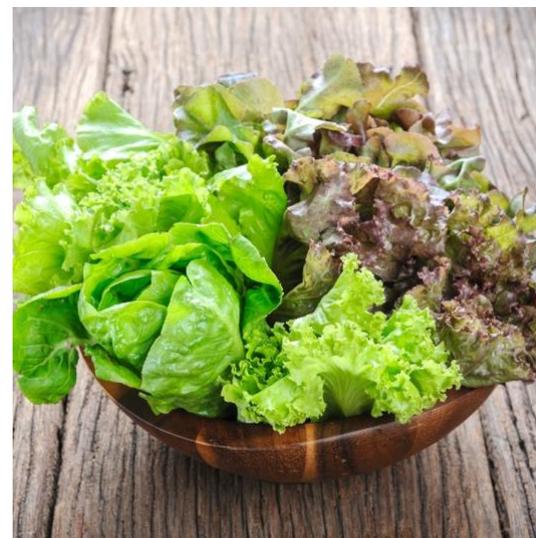

Curly Kale

Ethiopian Kale

Swiss Chard

SALAD GREENS

Spicy. Sweet. Crunchy. Tender. Delicate. Peppery. All describe this wonderful group of crops that ensure a consistent supply of diverse colors, textures, and flavors for your daily salads. High-producing and very space-efficient, salad greens are Southern California's winter delight! If you tire of typical salads, try our Mesclun Mix, with its blend of lively flavors and colors.

Buttercrunch Lettuce

Romaine Lettuce

Colorful Lettuce

Red/Green Mix

Mesclun Mix

Spinach

Arugula

We love all the hues of greens and purples, it's such a beautiful palette that really just feels like winter.

BRASSICAS

Space and patience are required with these beauties. Aside from broccoli, the brassicas produce one head per plant. Broccoli will continue giving small shoots for about a month after the main crop, which is why it's one of our favorites for home gardens. These attractive and colorful plants are the stalwart of the winter garden and the tender, flavorful heads are worth the wait.

White Cauliflower

Colorful Cauliflower

Romanesco Broccoli

Broccoli

Green Cabbage

Purple Cabbage

ROOT CROPS

The distinctive flavors and appearance of root crops make them a welcome addition to the kitchen. Roasted, raw, steamed, or boiled, this broad-ranging group is at home in a wide variety of dishes! While radishes produce quickly, most other root crops take several months. If you've been timid with turnips, we recommend the delicate texture and mild flavor of Hakurei turnips, a true home garden gem.

Orange Carrots

Colorful Carrots

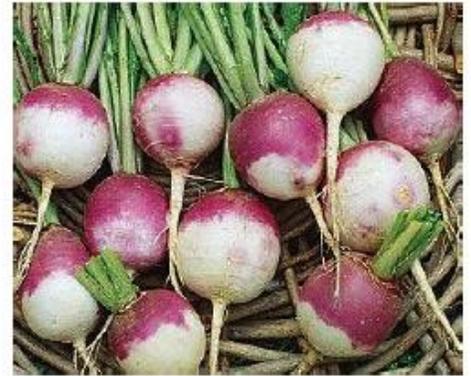

Chioggia Beets

Red Beets

Golden Beets

Purple Top Turnips

Hakurei Turnips

Easter Egg Radishes

French Breakfast/Red Radishes

AROMATICS

Excellent compact crops that are not only delicious but also help repel pests. We recommend early harvest for tender green garlic and spring onions. They won't store, but they have a more delicate and balanced flavor. Onion leaves can also be snipped to add zesty flavor to dishes (fennel too!).

Red Spring-Onions

Yellow Spring-Onions

Purple Scallions

Scallions

Green Garlic

Fennel

HERBS

Space-efficient and full of flavor, herbs are a must for any garden. Nothing adds a punch to a meal like fresh herbs snipped from the garden moments before use!

Cilantro

Chives

Parsley

Oregano

Dill

Winter Savory

Sage

Thyme

People get excited to learn that you can eat the flowers of cilantro, dill, fennel, and more...

PEAS

Growing up the trellis, these prolific producers create a verdant and lovely backdrop to the winter garden. Raw Snap Peas, think "snack peas," make such a tasty winter snack that they rarely make it to the kitchen! Snow Peas are ideal for stir frying.

Snap Peas

Snow Peas

Snap Peas are a vibrant and vigorous crop, bringing bright green saturation against the winter gray, whimsical tendrils and flowers, and best of all: sweet and crunchy snap peas!

FLOWERS

We often include edible and beneficial flowers in a Farmscape garden bed. Blooms can attract beneficial insects that aid in pollination and pest control. Plus, edible flowers look great in salads.

Alyssum

Nasturtium

Pansies & Violas

Still not sure what to grow? Farmer's Choice is a great way to get a balanced harvest of our favorite winter vegetables. Below is a list of what would typically be included, but keep in mind that garden size will dictate the final crop selection. Our experts may add more exotic crops if they feel you might enjoy them! If you want Farmer's Choice, feel free to let us know if there is anything you specifically want added or subtracted.

SAMPLE SELECTION

Scallions
Broccoli
Swiss Chard
Kale Mix
Peas
Carrots
Radish Mix

Red Beets
Arugula
Arugula
Mesclun Mix
Herbs
Flowers

